It began about 3:42 pm when Gallup Police Officer Steven Peshlakai was waved down by a woman who said a man had a knife. She pointed him out, and Peshlakai went into the Dollar General and met with Gabriel Curley.

Curley said he had a knife but it was on his belt loop. He said a man pulled a knife on him and pointed to a man who was standing across the street. That man was Jesse Fred.

Peshlakai said the police had received a number of reports throughout the day of Fred harassing and threatening people in the walkway.

Curley said Fred was harassing him at his home on South Second Street, and Curley finally told him to leave. Fred continued to refuse to leave, said Curley, and finally threatened to stab him and scatter his pieces around town.

At that point, Curley said Fred pulled a folding knife out of his pocket. He also said he pulled out his knife, which was attached to his belt and told him to do something. Fred eventually walked away.

When he talked to Fred, he said Curley pulled out a knife on him. When he was questioned, Fred did not have a knife on him.

Peshlakai then went and talked to Gabriel Curley's father, James, who said he saw Fred pull out a knife from his front pocket. At that point, Fred was arrested for aggravated assault.

evidence and evading arrest.

The incident occurred on June 14 about 7 am, when a caller said his neighbor was robbed and the man who did it was walking towards Arnold Street. It turned out the owners of the residence were out of town.

Police soon were able to track down the suspect and watched as he began placing items in a large bush south of Arnold Street. Henry was soon caught himself. When police searched the bush, they found several pieces of jewelry and possible narcotics. When Henry was questioned, he admitted going into the residence with another person and taking some items. He was booked for breaking and entering, larceny, tampering with evidence, and resisting/evading/obstructing an officer.

Police also arrested him on an outstanding warrant, for 20 counts of “non-residential burglary” for breaking into storage units June 11.

Both cases are being heard by District Court Judge Robert Aragon.
