He worked as an assistant to the President of the Navajo tribe. He worked as an educator for Sandia National Laboratories in 1983 where he retired from in 2007. He was well known within the Navajo tribe and spoke fluently in the Navajo language. Jim was known as the wise friend, whom everyone trusted and respected. He was known as papa and he instilled discipline, integrity and good moral values within his kids and grandkids.

Papa would share his life stories with anyone who would listen. He had a strong connection to his Native American culture and would share those traditions with the family. Jim truly lived life to the fullest through simple pleasures. He will be sorely missed, but we will remember him through his teachings and stories.
