

TRAIN-TRACK ATTACK

9/24, GALLUP

Around 5 pm, McKinley County Sheriff's Office Deputy Salina Brown was dispatched to the Gallup Flea Market at 340 Ninth St. in reference to a male who'd been hit by a baseball bat and needed medical attention.

According to her report, at the scene, Brown found two security guards and a man with a "golf ball size knot to the middle of his forehead, busted lip, swelling and bruising to his facial area," near the train.

The injured subject said he was walking home — south of the flea market, on the east side of the railroad tracks by an abandoned shack, according to a report — when he was attacked by three unknown males with a miniature baseball bat.

The victim told Brown he blacked out for two hours, came-to, and walked back to the flea market to ask for help. The victim was transported to a local hospital.

Brown met the victim at the hospital to interview him. The victim said he went to the flea market and bought binoculars, which he had in a front pocket. He carried "60, no $120" —and later, he said, "147.00," according to the report — in another pocket, and thought perhaps his attackers noticed him put it there and followed him.

He was taking the trail along the tracks to his girlfriend's house.

The attackers wore hoodies and Converse shoes. His money and his cellphone were gone when he came-to.

Clark and others with the MCSO made contact with two individuals who the calling party said were involved. The individuals were detained and taken to the scene.

At the scene, a Navajo Police Department officer told a female to open the door; she refused. The NPD officer crawled through a window and let Clark in. The officers made contact with the female and a 13-year-old girl. The 13-year-old was put into the NPD officer's car.

Clark found a male subject hiding in a crawlspace in the attic. The male refused commands to exit the crawlspace. The officers sprayed OC (pepper spray) into the attic. After about 20 minutes, the male climbed down, was handcuffed, and placed in the NPD officer's vehicle.

The male subject, Donovan Barney, had a big cut on his hairline and a swollen right eye. He reportedly hit the 13-year-old, whose siblings got upset and began to fight him.
